

LOST and FOUND

“A rose by any other name would smell as sweet.” - Shakespeare
(As long as you can find it.)

What is in a name? With the constant acquisitions in the world of pump manufactures, some would think a name of pump manufacture means nothing. Navigating the pump world with out a program can be quite difficult. Would you believe the following partial list of previously independent pump manufactures is now controlled by only 5 companies?

A-C Pump	Marlow Pumps
ACEC Centrifugal	Morris Pumps
Aldrich	Myers
Aurora	Nassa Johnston Pumps
Bell & Gossett	Pacific Pump
Byron Jackson	Paco
Chicago Pumps	Peerless

The basic history of RuhRPumpen, Inc. is short as they established their name in the United States on December 29, 2000. As part of the mandate of the US Justice Department, Flowserve was required to divest itself of certain products and the Tulsa pump plant (originally a Byron Jackson plant) before the Justice Department would approve Flowserve's purchase of IDP.

The main products that remain at our Tulsa plant are a complete line of vertical pumps including the VLT, VMT, and cryogenic technology along with the SCE and J line horizontal API-610 pump models. The purchase of the Tulsa plant by was an asset purchase, which included a 330,000 Square foot manufacturing plant, all 22 acres of land, the equipment, offices, patterns, and engineering drawings. The people who designed the pumps, project managed, engineered, machined, tested the equipment, and provided the after order support are still employed in Tulsa. In effect, the name changed, but the product, people, and plant remain the same.

Ruhrpumpen is just one of the new names for a manufacture who is still building pumps you know and love. Ruhrpumpen also is building pumps with the heritage of Crane Deming, Pacific, Worthington, and Johnston. Let us help you find your pump's new home.
